L. G. DYNES. Monnay, November 24, 1862.

News of the Week.

Our last number had not more than reached its country readers when we had the news that the "ball was opened" at Fredericksburg. The 11th had been chosen as the day to commence crossing the river and the pontoons had been conveyed to the riverside during the night. The rebels seem to have had some idea of what was pending, rockets having been seen within their lines during the night, and about 5 a. m. two signal guns were fired. At this time our engineers commenced laying three bridges for our troops to cross upon .-When about half completed, a murderous fire of infantry was opened from the city, which drove the hands from the work, several being killed and wounded. Gen. Burnside now ordered the guns previously put in position, 143 in number, to be opened on the city. This was the first firing on our back the infantry and firing the city in several places.

The enemy opened with their heavy guns about 7, but did little injury. There being a cessation of the firing from 1 to 2, all in position, 176 in all. At a sig. ported (by the Herald) 200,000 In the paragraphs I shall barri- sure, and is an assumption of our available guns were placed nal, all opened upon the city, but the rebel sharpshooters could not be drawn from their hiding-places, to permit the completion of the bridges, and volunteers were called for to cross in small boats. Hundreds stepped forward. One hundred were chosen. They soon crossed, with some loss, while the artillery threw a perfect shower of iron hail on the opposite shore. With fixed bayonets they rushed upon the enemy, killing some and taking over their own number in prisoners, who were safely landed on this side.
